OIE Refines Policies and Procedures on Reporting and Responding to Discrimination and Harassment

The Duke policy and procedures for reporting and responding to harassment and discrimination has undergone a number of substantial updates and revisions based, in part, on community feedback and legal updates. The adjustments went into effect at the start of the fall 2022 semester.

OIE Welcomes Vakia Robinson to the Office Team

The Office for Institutional Equity is pleased to announce the arrival of Vakia (pronounced "vuh-KEY-ah") Robinson as the new program staff assistant for harassment & discrimination prevention and compliance. Vakia holds a B.S. in sociology from Belmont University in Nashville, TN. Previously, she focused on student engagement, academic support, and social media management. Join OIE in welcoming Vakia to Duke!

DEI-Focused Business Case by Duke Deans Wins First Prize
Associate Dean Jeremy Petranka and Assistant Dean Stephanie Robertson of the Fuqua School of Business won first place in the 2022 DEI Global Case Competition, sponsored by the William Davidson Institute. The case centers around Duke Fuqua alumna, Cara Robinson Sabin, her leadership at Sundial Brands (SheaMoisture), and how the business has overcome challenges in the wake of the Black Lives Matter movement in 2020.

Duke Libraries Partners with the Civil Rights Movement Archive

The online archive, which was founded in 1999, serves as a repository for historical documents and letters, videos, and images from many civil rights veterans. Under the terms of the agreement, Duke will maintain the website and promote public use of its materials in order to support the archive's mission of making the stories of grassroots activists more widely known.

Mellon-Mays Fellows: Building Opportunities for Students, Diversity in the Academy
There's a lot of talk throughout higher education about how to attract students of color and students without a legacy background into graduate studies and academic careers, particularly in fields such as the social sciences, arts, and humanities. While other programs have been seeking solutions, the Mellon-Mays Undergraduate Fellowship has been doing this work successfully for several decades, benefiting both Duke faculty and students.

Taking on Too Much at Work?

Responsibility is a crucial component of effective leadership. However, leaders can sometimes become unduly responsible — taking on the work, emotions, errors, and difficulties of others. There's a good chance that, over time, leaders have assumed many obligations that lie outside the scope of their primary role.

Duke's Just Ask Program Rolls Out Nationally
The American Society of Clinical Oncology and the Association of Community Cancer Centers have both backed Duke's Just Ask program as a way to train people about implicit bias and systemic and structural racism. Dr. Nadine Barrett, who runs the Center for Equity in Research, made the Just Ask program to help get more people from different backgrounds to join clinical trials.

A Dance With a Global Health Message

In Uganda this summer, Duke student Lihua Mo blended music, dance and art to raise awareness and reduce stigma about sickle cell disease. About 300,000 children are born annually with sickle cell disease in Africa, with around half of them dying before their fifth year.

Duke University Institutional Statement of Commitment to Diversity and Inclusion

Duke aspires to create a community built on collaboration, innovation, creativity, and belonging. Our collective success depends on the robust exchange of ideas—an exchange that is best when the rich diversity of our perspectives, backgrounds, and experiences flourishes. To achieve this exchange, it is essential that all members of the community feel secure and welcome, that the contributions of all individuals are respected, and that all voices are heard. All members of our community have a responsibility to uphold these values.
